

Online Class Implementation Policy

The School of Design and the Graduate School of Design determine the instruction for each course based on its educational effectiveness. In principle, classes that need to be conducted in person in order to achieve sufficient educational effects should be conducted in person, and classes that are expected to have high educational effects when conducted online will be conducted partially or entirely online.

However, in cases where students are restricted from coming to campus due to disasters, disease outbreaks, etc., classes that can be offered online will be offered online. In such cases, students will not be required to come to campus in principle. As for practical training courses, we will do our best to conduct them in person, but if it is impossible to do so during the semester, we will take measures such as changing the semester in which the course is offered
